

Cool Picks

New gear for every skier on your holiday gift list

For the Pint-Sized Park n' Piper

Armada's nimble-yet-stable Bantam is shaped specially for li'l rippers aged five to seven. ($310; armadaskis.com)

For the Hot and Cold Skier

Columbia's Resolute Down Vest employs its revolutionary new Omni-Heat thermal reflective technology. Claim to fame? It actually regulates a skier's body temperature. ($170; columbiasportswear.ca)

For the Reluctant Helmet Wearer

POC's flashy new featherweight Synapsis 2.0 Aurelien is bulletproof strong, yet so light it goes barely noticed. ($230; pocsports.com)

For the Frontside Racer & Backside Chaser

Nordica's new all-terrain expert-only Fire Arrow combines a racing ski's carve with a powder ski's float. ($1,000; nordica.com)

For Feet in Motion

Columbia's popular men's Bugaboot is back, this time with an Omni-Heat membrane that reflects a foot's heat back on itself. Think space blanket for your feet. ($140; columbiasportswear.ca)

For the Skier Craving Warmth and Style

When it's cold and damp, she can cuddle into Arc'teryx stylish new moisture-wicking base layer Phase SV Hoody. ($80; arcteryx.com)

For the Travelling All-Mountaineer

Two sets of fat skis and a snowboard snuggle together in High Sierra's new Wheeled Double-Decker Ski/Snowboard Combo bag. ($200; highsierrasport.com)

For Hands in Motion

All-new OutDry technology makes Mountain Hardwear's Medusa Mitt lightweight, warm, waterproof and breathable. ($160; mountain-hardwear.com)

For the Après-Ski Hipster

This handcrafted Bonus pom-pom toque in pop-out orange by Chaos guarantees she'll garner après-ski notice. ($24; chaoshats.com)

